

We Will Be Jaguars: A Memoir of My People

by Nemonte Nenquimo and Mitch Anderson

About the Book

From a fearless, internationally acclaimed activist comes an impassioned memoir about an indigenous childhood, a clash of cultures and the fight to save the Amazon rainforest.

WE WILL BE JAGUARS is an astonishing memoir by an equally astonishing woman. Nemonte Nenquimo is a winner of TIME magazine's Earth Award, and MS. magazine named this book among the Most Anticipated Feminist Books of 2024.

Born into the Waorani tribe of Ecuador's Amazon rainforest --- one of the last to be contacted by missionaries in the 1950s --- Nemonte Nenquimo had a singular upbringing.

She was taught about plant medicines, foraging, oral storytelling and shamanism by her elders. At age 14, she left the forest for the first time to study with an evangelical missionary group in the city. Eventually, her ancestors began appearing in her dreams, pleading with her to return and embrace her own culture. She listened.

Two decades later, Nemonte has emerged as one of the most forceful voices in climate change activism. She has spearheaded the alliance of indigenous nations across the Upper Amazon and led her people to a landmark victory against Big Oil, protecting over a half-million acres of primary rainforest. Her message is as sharp as a spear --- honed by her experiences battling loggers, miners, oil companies and missionaries.

In WE WILL BE JAGUARS, Nemonte partners with her husband, Mitch Anderson, founder of Amazon Frontlines, digging into generations of oral history, uprooting centuries of conquest, hacking away at racist notions of indigenous peoples, and ultimately revealing a life story as rich, harsh and vital as the Amazon rainforest herself.

Discussion Guide

1. At the beginning of the book, Nemonte Nenquimo says that she is scared to write her story. Why do you think that is? What do you think makes her feel afraid?
2. The Waorani have an oral culture: they develop, maintain and share knowledge through storytelling and song, both of which are incredibly important to daily and spiritual life. What do you think are some of the implications for Nemonte of deciding to write a book and create a written record of Waorani history?
3. Besides the writing of the book itself, what kinds of interactions do Nemonte and her people have with writing and documents in the stories she tells?
4. In the introduction, Nemonte writes, "For us, stories are living beings. They breathe life into our homes, into our forests. They pulse in our blood, in our dreams." What does it mean that a story lives? What are the pivotal stories in the book? Why do you think Nemonte chose to share them? What stories are not told or only partially told?
5. Many books written by outsiders treat the Amazon rainforest as a place of danger. How does Nemonte write about the forest? Discuss some of the descriptions of the forest --- the animal and plant life there --- that most struck you? Why?
6. Trust is a major theme in the book, particularly between Waorani and outsiders. Which moments struck you where Nemonte decided to trust an outsider? Where did she withdraw her trust? In both cases, why do you think she made her decision? Where was her trust respected, and where was it broken?
7. We learn that the first missionaries who landed in Nemonte's village were speared to death. Since then, the Waorani have hosted the sister --- named Rachel Saint --- of one of those killed. What is her role in the village, and why do the Waorani tolerate her presence? What does the reader learn about the cowori (white people) like Rachel Saint through the perspectives of those in the village?
8. How does Nemonte's story and experience with Western missionaries and their version of Christianity impact your reflections on missionary movements and religious faith, values and community?
9. On p. 110, Nemonte's father, Tiri, says, "Oil is the blood of our ancestors." What is the significance of this statement?
10. Nemonte's story contains many aspects: it is a coming-of-age story, a story of Indigenous resistance, a woman's story, a love story and a family story. What aspects of Nemonte's journey spoke to you? Did you identify with her? How or when?
11. Nemonte and her mother, Manuela, have a complex relationship. One of the turning points is on pages 47 and 48 when Manuela finds out that Nemonte has stolen lipstick from the Baihua family. What do you think about the trajectory of their mother-daughter relationship, including this incident?

12. What do you think the authors mean by the title WE WILL BE JAGUARS? What does it mean for the Waorani people to become jaguars? Do you think other people, readers in the United States for example, could become jaguars? How so?

13. If you could have a discussion with Nemonte and the women of her community, what would you want to talk about? What questions might you ask?

14. On page 316, the authors write, "A part of the dream of this book...is that readers will be moved to learn more, to question more, to consider and take actions in their daily lives that we will never know about." Are there actions you could take that would have an impact on the lives of Nemonte and her people. Even if they will never know about them?

Author Bio

Nemonte Nenquimo is a leader of the Waorani people, co-founder of the Ceibo Alliance, and an internationally acclaimed activist. Born in the Amazon region of Ecuador in 1985, she is a winner of the 2020 Goldman Environmental Prize and was named to TIME's 100 Most Influential People of 2020 list (lauded by Leonardo DiCaprio).

We Will Be Jaguars: A Memoir of My People

by Nemonte Nenquimo and Mitch Anderson

Publication Date: September 17, 2024

Genres: Memoir, Nonfiction

Hardcover: 368 pages

Publisher: Harry N. Abrams

ISBN-10: 1419763776

ISBN-13: 9781419763779