by Frances Whiting

About the Book

Tallulah de Longland,' she said slowly, letting all the Ls in my name loll about lazily in her mouth before passing judgement. 'That,' she announced, 'is a serious glamorgeous name.'

From the day Annabelle Andrews sashays into her classroom, Tallulah 'Lulu' de Longland is bewitched: by Annabelle, by her family, and their sprawling, crumbling house tumbling down to the river.

Their unlikely friendship intensifies through a secret language where they share confidences about their unusual mothers, first loves and growing up in the small coastal town of Juniper Bay. Their lives become as entwined as Annabelle's initials engraved beneath the de Longland kitchen table.

But the euphoria of youth rarely lasts, and the implosion that destroys their friendship leaves lasting scars and a legacy of self-doubt that haunts Lulu into adulthood.

Years later, Lulu is presented with a choice: remain the perpetual good girl who misses out, or finally step out from the shadows and do something extraordinary. And possibly unforgivable.

It's not how far you fall, but how high you bounce.

Discussion Guide

1. At the beginning of their friendship, Lulu and Annabelle tell each other everything. However, once Lulu falls for Josh, she begins to play her cards closer to her chest, admitting, 'I could have told her that he tasted like almonds and smelt like lemons and that the softest place on his skin was everywhere. I didn't tell her those things, but in the end, it didn't matter --- she found it all out herself?' (pg. 38). Why do you think she begins to conceal her true feelings about Josh to her best friend?

2. WALKING ON TRAMPOLINES is populated with characters who play with words, using them to create special bonds or leave multitudes unspoken. Consider Annabelle and Lulu's mish-mash neologisms, such as "glamorguous" and "disapanish." How do these function in their relationship? Also consider the names for Rose's dresses. What does it mean when Harry remarks she's wearing "Doris," or when Lulu is relieved she's wearing "Betty"? How do these names fill in for tacit feelings and underlying understandings in this family?

3. As their time at school draws to an end, Lulu notes, "Annabelle had grown a different skin, shedding who she used to be when I wasn't looking. A new, brittle layer masked her softness. I saw less and less of her as the year wound down; we didn't always walk home together, and when we did she would walk slightly ahead of me, and I could never quite catch up" (pg. 84). What marks this change in Annabelle? Might it precede her fling with Josh, or develop because of it?

4. On page 90, Annabelle and Lulu argue about Annie's affair: "And if people are too stupid, or don't care enough, to see what's going on right in front of them, Tallulah, then they get what they deserve." Though Annabelle is speaking of her parents' relationship, this statement causes Lulu to immediately realize what Annabelle and Josh have been doing behind her back. Why does Lulu finally reach this conclusion in this moment? Do you think the circumstances lend any sympathy to Annabelle's actions?

5. When Lulu first meets Ben, she notes, "Our lives blended neatly one into the other with no messy edges" (pg. 123). Is this a good or bad thing for Lulu? Ultimately, why is it not enough?

6. After Lulu discovers Josh and Annabelle's affair, Josh tries to apologize to her by saying, "It's complicated? it just kind of happened; I know it's really bad for you? But I love you, Tallulah-Lulu. I always will." He leant in toward me. "You're my girl," he whispered" (pg. 138). Why does Josh say this after committing himself to Annabelle? How does it meet or differ from Lulu's expectations of his apology?

7. While working on a new piece, artist Frank Andrews consults Harry de Longland: "I can't get the black right." Harry replies, "Black's black, isn't it?" Frank answers, "No, mate, there's all kinds of blackness" (pg. 144). There is a complicit understanding between the two as they think of their wives. Consider the many shades of both Annie and Rose's "blackness." How does it manifest for each woman? How does it affect their respective families; their respective daughters?

8. When Lulu receives the invitation to Annabelle and Josh's wedding, she despairs, "What had I been thinking? That Josh would leave Annabelle for me? That Annabelle would leave Josh for me? That they would take me with them wherever they traveled to next? That they would realize that out of all of us, I was the one worth hanging on to?" (pg. 189). What outcome do you think Lulu would prefer --- that Josh would come back for her, proving her the more desirable of the two women? Or that Annabelle would leave Josh so they might rekindle their friendship? At the end of the novel, is either Josh or Annabelle the greatest love of Lulu's life?

9. Frank Andrews reveals the tree house in his backyard needs to be taken down, as ordered by the neighborhood council (pg. 285). What does the tree house symbolize for Lulu? Why is she determined to fight against its destruction?

10. When Lulu first senses the advances of the charming Will Barton, Duncan's friend on Willow, why does she seemingly try to avoid him at all cost, claiming she doesn't deserve him (pg. 289)? What ultimately allows her to give into her own feelings and give in to Will?

11. Discuss the role of guilt and forgiveness in WALKING ON TRAMPOLINES. How do the two intertwine and develop in the following relationships: a) Annabelle and Josh vs. Lulu, b) Lulu vs. Ben, c) Annie vs. Frank, etc. Most of all, think about how Lulu experiences guilt and forgiveness within herself.

12. Before Lulu sees Rose descend into the ocean, her mother whispers, "There is no such thing as afar" (pg. 320). After Rose's funeral, Lulu says the same to her father. What does the sentiment mean to Rose? Does it mean the same thing to Lulu?

13. Consider Duncan McAllister's role in Lulu's life, outside the realm of employer/employee. Why do Duncan and Lulu have a consistently platonic relationship, despite Duncan's famous philandering? How does his friendship compare to Annabelle's? How does his mentorship compare to Harry de Longland's?

Author Bio

Frances Whiting is Queensland's favorite and best-known female columnist, engaging her readers with pithy and accessible observations of the highs, lows and unique absurdities of life in weekly pieces for the widely-circulated Sunday Mail. She is also Associate Editor of the Sunday Mail and Senior Feature writer for Q Weekend in the Courier-Mail. She has published two collections of her columns, OH TO BE A MARCHING GIRL, and THAT'S A HOME RUN, TIGER! Frances is married with two children, and when she gets the time, she plays the guitar (badly) and surfs (also badly). WALKING ON TRAMPOLINES is her first novel.

Critical Praise

"A tender exploration of friendship, families, and first love."
